

Fire investigation services

EFI Global provides fire investigation services to help customers determine the origin and cause of fires and explosions. With the largest team of fire investigation experts in the industry, we are able to offer a wide range of technical and scientific services for clients.

Comprehensive solutions

We provide expert investigation services for residential, commercial, industrial, vehicle, equipment, marine and wildland fires to help adjusters effectively manage and resolve claims. We require that every fire investigator be qualified in origin and cause investigations and receive ongoing training to industry standards.

When a fire or explosion occurs, we offer comprehensive services for customers including:

- Origin and cause investigations
- Chemical and flammability laboratory analysis
- Component testing
- Content inventory verification and analysis
- Evidence collection, storage and preservation
- Litigation support
- Marine fire investigation
- Product failure analysis
- Subrogation, fraud and liability investigations
- Wildland fire investigations

In addition, our team of forensic engineering experts can assist with investigations related to complex losses. For arson investigations, our experienced team knows what to look for and can identify red flags at both the desk level and on scene.

We have fire investigators from coast to coast, and many of our experts have worked on international assignments. With this coverage, we are able to ensure a timely response to any event, anytime, anywhere.
