Real-time data integration for unemployment and verification services

As costly data breaches and cyber attacks continue, employers need reliable systems in place to help them avoid the risks of data exposure for their employees, customers and businesses. When it comes to unemployment claims, our data integration solution offers a unique strategy that can eliminate over 99% of the data exposure.

The power of real time, on-demand data integration

Rather than using files with personally identifiable information (PII) on every employee for every pay cycle, we are able to leverage application programming interface (API) technology to pull data only for individuals with a claim or verification request – and only at the time it is needed. We do not store aggregate PII or employee demographic data on either platform and employer data is never co-mingled.

This real-time integration capability reduces data exposure and provides increased efficiency, speeding up the claims management process. Our ability to gather up-to-the-minute income data and separation records enables our specialists to quickly process the majority of claims resulting from lack of work and voluntary quit issues.
